Selling Diseased Meat.

Stevens Point Journal:—Anton Tomaszewski of the town of Sharon brought two hind quarters of beef to the city Tuesday and was offering the same for sale on the public square.

When it became evident to those who stopped to look at it that it was diseased. The case was reported to Dr. Neupert, Sr., city health officer, and later the meat was confiscated.

After consultation between the health officer, Dr. Hy Wild, city meat inspector, and Chief of Police Hafsoos. Today the meat was further examined by Dr. Wild who gave it out as his opinion that it was in a very bad condition as the result of tubercular trouble and there were also indications of septicemia or blood poisoning.

The critter was probably killed while in a dying condition from some acute illness. The meat was destroyed by burial today. The officers were unable to learn definitely what because of the two front quarters of the critter but were told that they were held in reserve to be marketed later. The owner was not prosecuted.

A few days ago a farmer brought in two hogs that were apparently diseased. Some one unwisely told him that the meat inspector had been absent for he whipped up his horses to a gallop and got out of town before the inspector could get there although he left his dinner to answer the call.

Inexperienced buyers should be careful about buying meat on the square.

Were Looking Over Asylums.

The insane asylum committee, appointed at the last meeting of the county board, spent the better part of last week looking over some of the county insane asylums in the state, and informing themselves on matters pertaining to the building of such institutions.

Among the institutions they visited were the Marinette county asylum, Racine county and the Waukesha asylum, leaving here on Tuesday last week and getting home on Monday of this week. On their way from Peshigo to the southern part of the state they were snowbound for several hours and had to wait until the train was shoveled out before they could proceed on their way.

Among those in the party were J. S. Thompson, Robert Connor, George Ward, J. G. Chandler of Racine and Henry VanRyn of Milwaukee. The members of the committee feel well paid for the time spent, as this is their first experience in the matter of erecting an institution of this sort, and they feel that they cannot learn too much before starting in.

The bonds for the erection of the asylum have been accepted by the bonding company and are probably signed by this time.

We Are Not the Only Ones.

A mail comes from the editor of the Hancock News to the effect that his rollers went to Hancock, Michigan, instead of Wisconsin, and the consequence was that it took a long time to get them back and when they did get them they were not good for anything.

He should not mind a little thing like that. About all of our mail is pawed over at Grand Rapids, Michigan, before it comes here. Then if there is any of it they do not care for it is sent to Grand Rapids, Minn., and they take out what they want, and what is left comes here. It doesn't make so much difference with the mail matter, for that generally turns up at the right place sometime, even if the envelope does look as if it had been thru a war or something of that sort, but when they get hold of a piece of freight that belongs to us over there they hate to let go of it, and sometimes it takes quite a struggle and considerable time to get them to do the proper thing.

The lecture, Friday night at Daly Theatre, by Mr. Arthur Wellman, embraces Norway, Spitzbergen, Camp Wellman, and various scenes in the Arctic and occurrences in the several attempts to reach the North Pole by air ship. Views of all will be thrown on canvas, and fully explained thus making an unusual instructive and pleasing sight. Mr. Wellman has just returned from Spitzbergen, and all views are from original photographs, and tell the true story.

FACING DEATH in the FROZEN NORTH

Heroic Self-Sacrifice of Peary's Surgeon

By EDWARD B. CLARK
Copyright by W. A. PATTERSON

ONE DAY it may be Commander Robert E. Peary will tell in his own words the story of the self-sacrifice of Dr. Edward B. Vincent, the youthful surgeon who accompanied the Peary Arctic expedition of 1897. All the stories of heroism in the Arctic region have not yet been told. The leaders of the polar expeditions have not been the only men to show high courage and devotion to duty in the face of danger.

Dr. Edward B. Vincent was killed accidentally not long ago in the city of Detroit. He was the brother of Judge William A. Vincent of Chicago. The story of the young physician's devotion and self-sacrifice has been told by one man, James Davidson, who until recently was in the United States consular service. Davidson was a member of the Arctic expedition of 1897 and it was on his behalf that Vincent looked death in the face.

It is a simple tale, this, yet it is one that strengthens faith in human nature and makes the most unimpassioned of us give thanks that such men as this young Illinois physician sometimes live. Peary and his party of 19 men started from Etah in early April of the second year of the expedition to make the dash for the pole. April—the spring month—the thermometer registered 60 degrees below zero when the little band of hardy arctic explorers reached a place about 140 miles from their starting point. One night they pitched their two tents and turned in.

A storm arose. It was a howling blizzard without the snowfall a blizzard with the thermometer 92 degrees below the freezing point. The tent in which one-half of the explorers slept was ripped by the wind into threads. The occupants made their way as best they could to their comrades' shelter. The distance was not great, but in covering it the feet of one of the men, Davidson, were frozen. It became necessary almost at once to amputate portions of both extremities. The operation was performed by Surgeon Vincent.

It was, of course, impossible for Davidson to proceed with the party on the march to the pole. To leave him where he was meant death. There was but one thing to do, and that was to send him back over the wastes and the ice floes and through the awful bitterness of the cold to the place whence they had come. Seven miles back were some natives and something like adequate shelter. Peary could spare but one man to go back with Davidson. It was obviously the place of the surgeon to go on the return journey with his patient, a journey that every one in the band believed meant death for the two men who would undertake it.

Edward B. Vincent gave up without a murmur that for which he had no longer the chance to be one of the men to reach that goal of the explorers' ambition; the north pole. His duty was to Davidson and with Davidson he stayed. Peary gave the two men a sledge, four dogs and some supplies. They turned their faces in the direction of Etah and set out through that region of frozen silence. Davidson was unable to walk. He was a big man, and his weight proved a burden to the dogs. For two days they went on slowly. On the evening of the second day they made their small fire and started to brew some tea. The blizzard set out of the pot and it could not be fixed. In the only vessel of any kind that they had with them, in it they had heated their pemmican and steeped their tea. That accident, apparently trifling in itself, those two men felt might mean their death. From that time on they ate frozen food and had no warming beverage.

On the third day there came a realization that they were lost. At last there was no food left which could be started to keep on the march. The dogs, Vincent had two of the crocodiles away and killed them that they might serve as food for the two remaining animals. Both men were weak to the point of exhaustion. Vincent kept up his good cheer and rallied his patient by his hopefulness. Then he went into the harness, taking the place of the animals that he had slain, and used his remaining strength to help drag the sledges onward. The two remaining dogs gave out. There would have been the blackness of despair had it not been for something in the spirit of those two men that made them see light.

"Doctor," said Davidson, "You can't drag me further. There is no reason why both of us should die. Uncomfortable, perhaps you can make your way to the old camp. Try it."

Vincent's answer was the fitting of the harness over his shoulders once more and the trudging onward, dragging the sledge with its weakened burden behind him. "Doctor," said Davidson once more, "you'd better go." Vincent turned with a sort of half smile. "Davidson," he said, "it's really possible, as a mere matter between men, I might think it my duty to desert you and leave you here to die. You must remember, however, that I am a doctor and you're my patient, and it would be unethical to the last degree for me to go away and leave you, so I'm afraid I'll have to put up with me."

The physician dragged his patient on through the horror of the awful stillness. Finally the end was at hand. Vincent was tottering and Davidson, weakened as the result of the operation he had undergone, coupled with the exposure and lack of food, was practically in a fainting condition. The sledge had been brought to a point from which swept away for over a mile a gentle declivity, smooth with snow and ice. Vincent sat down on the edge of the sledge.

"Old fellow," he said, "I'm sorry, but I'm afraid it's almost up with me." Then he turned away his head, but in a moment was on his feet. Far down to the right of the sloping plain he saw a grim-looking rock which held his gaze. Then he turned to Davidson again. "I don't want to raise any false hopes," he said, "but that rock looks like one that stood not far from the place where the natives are. It is like a thousand others and probably I am wrong, but God knows it's our last hope. I can't drag you further, but I'll not leave you. We'll go together. We can slide down this declivity with our sledges. We may go into a crevasse, as you know, and that means death, but it's death anyway unless when we pass that rock we see some huts beyond and to the right."

Then those two men kissed each other, but spoke not a word.

Vincent used his last remaining strength to start the sledge. It went slowly with its patient, but then, down the barely perceptible incline. Occasionally the accelerated speed would be checked by a smooth billow of ice over which they rode smoothly. They were approaching the rock which to Vincent had looked familiar. They were almost up to it. On what the first look around the rock should reveal the physician knew meant life or death. He turned and looked at his comrade. Davidson's eyes were closed tight in the agony between the hope and fear of the moment. Vincent looked to the right and beyond. "Doctor, is it death?" came a voice from behind. "No, life."

Occasionally at the United States military academy, in seeking to teach the lesson of the beauty of self-sacrifice, the chaplain will tell the cadets that all heroes who give up their lives for principle do not die by rifle shot or saber stroke. The martial spirit that is engendered by military instruction and by the glorious heritage of the memory of the sons of the academy who gave up their lives for the flag often leads the cadet blade into a train of thought which holds that the death which is more fitting to the soldier than any other is that which comes at the hands of his country.

While the occurrence was fresher in the memory of all than it is perhaps today, the West Point chaplain, in the presence of the cadets, looked in upon the death of a cadet, James E. Bell, who died because of his devotion to duty. "Jumble" Bell, lovingly called "Jingle"

by his fellow cadets, was a brother of Maj. W. W. Bell of Chicago and an uncle of Lillian Bell, the writer. When Lillian Bell wrote her story, "The Under Side of Palmer" with its pathetic ending, she wrote the tale about the career of her uncle, Lieut. Bell, and gave to the story the depth of pathos that truth compels.

One of James E. Bell's classmates at West Point once said that when a man was fighting with another man he had something to grapple with, but that when a man was fighting disease the disease did all the grappling. You can't wound a disease adversary. Against him parry and thrust are nothing. Adjutant-General J. D. Townsend once said that to all his army career he had never known such honors to be paid to a volunteer as were offered to the memory of First Lieut. James E. Bell. Two general orders were issued from headquarters of the army, each paying tribute to the devotion of the young officer of artillery who had died on the Dry Tortugas of yellow fever.

Port Jefferson on the Tortugas in August of the year 1873 was quarantined by Lieut. M. First United States Army. Outside of the surgeons there was only one officer, Lieut. Bell, at the post. Capt. T. L. Langdon had been granted a leave of absence to go north to the home of his dying father. On August 28 yellow fever appeared at the post. Within two days four of the garrison had died. Upon the first announcement of the appearance of the scourge Lieut. Bell sent all the women and children and some of the married men to an island three miles away. Within a day or two he sent to the same place nearly all the well men of the garrison, retaining only enough to nurse the sick. There could have been no criticism of Bell's course had he gone with the garrison, leaving the sick to the care of the surgeons and nurses. He stayed and devoted himself to the care of the sick in the hospital, assisted by the men who had volunteered.

The heat was fearful. There was not a pound of ice on the island and many of the deaths that followed one after another were due to the lack of this necessity. There were 20 cases of the fever and for whole days and nights continuously the devoted lieutenant, the surgeons and the nurses knew no rest. With their own hands they dug the graves for the dead and with their own lips repeated over them the burial service.

Capt. Langdon, at the north end of the island, left of absence and hastened to return to his station. Some months before the outbreak of the fever Lieut. Bell had put in an application to be detailed as instructor of military science at the University of Vermont. The application had been granted and Capt. Langdon, hurrying south to join his command, carried in his pocket the order relieving Lieut. Bell from duty at Fort Jefferson and detailing him for work in Vermont. Langdon reached his post. He called in his first lieutenant and said: "I have here orders transferring you immediately to Vermont. You have done a noble work here. There is no reason why you should stay longer. You have been through enough of the awful thing. Go."

Bell said: "Captain, I don't want the order. If I read it I suppose I shall have to obey simply because it is an order. You keep it in your pocket until the fever is over and then I'll read it and go."

Langdon shook hands with him. Bell went on with his work. In a few days he felt the hot hand of the scourge on his brow. He went to his tent, pulled up his little camp table and wrote an official letter to the assistant adjutant-general at headquarters of the Department of the Gulf, Holy Springs, Miss. It was a long letter, covering many pages. There was in Bell's heart that day the fear that he might die and leave undone an act of duty to others. He cherished the thought of the loyalty of the surgeons and the enlisted men who had so nobly performed their duties to the sick and dying, facing the fever and death itself without flinching. He mentioned in the official communication each doctor and man by name, recommending them for recognition at the hands of the department. Of himself he said nothing, his whole thought was that recognition should be given where it was due.

Lieut. James E. Bell put down his pen, went to the hospital and in three days was dead.

The closing paragraph of one of the general orders touching this man and his love of duty are these: "The only officer in an isolated post when it was visited by a dangerous epidemic, he seemed to multiply himself in his ever-present care and watchfulness for the men of his command, and it is doubtless due to the exhaustion and fatigue resulting from his anxious discharge of duty that he finally fell a victim to the disease."

"He died in the faithful discharge of a soldier's duty." "Way up north were wife and child. The little one crept up to the black-robed mother and said: 'In my darling's faddy tummy home today?' " "Not to-day, dear. Perhaps to-morrow."

BALLOON ARTILLERY PROBLEM
While One Inventor Constructs Air Craft, Another Builds Guns to Destroy Them.
A writer in the Star has the following to say on the subject of aerial war craft:
Germany's government has been induced by the wonderful flights accomplished by the Zeppelin, Parseval and Gross airships to form an air fleet which already numbers six cruisers, but this very success has also awakened the German military authorities to the necessity of improving Germany's artillery with a view to combating hostile air fleets, and, therefore, just as Germany was first in the field with an aerial navy, so she leads the way with balloon artillery. This year both the Krupp and Ehrhardt works have placed balloon guns on the market.

Again, since a scouting airship, when nearing the hostile zone, will ascend to the greatest height attainable, the guns had to be made so as to fire practically perpendicularly to an immense height.

Krupps have constructed hitherto three makes of balloon guns—a 6.5 centimeter field gun, which fires a 4.3-gram projectile with an initial velocity of 620 meters, or about 2,000 feet a second, attaining at a maximum angle of discharge of 60 degrees and a height of 17,000 feet; a fortress 7.5 gun, firing a 6.4-kilogram shell and a heavy gun of 10.5 caliber, primarily intended for use on board warships.

The fortress gun can hit and destroy an airship at a height of 24,000 feet from a discharging angle of 75 degrees, so that as, on the evidence of Count Zeppelin himself, an airship only in case of emergency rises to a height of 5,000 feet, the range the new balloon artillery covers all cases. The naval gun can reach a height of 35,000 feet.

ABRUZZI IS COMING BACK
Duke Will Visit United States Next Spring and Get Miss Elkins' Final Answer.

Washington.—The duke of the Abruzzi, in a letter to a friend, declares his recent production to the Abruzzi navy will not interfere with his plans to visit this country early in the spring. According to present arrangements he will reach here in March. Under the auspices of the National Geographic society he will give four lectures on his own part of the Abruzzi coast. These lectures will be given in New York, Boston, Philadelphia and Washington.

It is reported here that this visit will take place with the understanding that he will not be treated as a visiting member of a royal house.

The information is being given to indicate a desire to receive a reply from Miss Katharine Elkins. One of her closest friends is authority for the statement that she will have made up her mind by that time as to whether she will yield her hand or not.

The report that no less a personage than King Edward was responsible for the additional difficulties in the troubled course of the duke's love-making has gained credence from the announcement of the duke's expected visit to America.

Opinions are still divided as to the nature of projectile to be discharged. For spherical balloons shrapnel is undoubtedly the best, but as a crusher of the Zeppelin type might sustain but little damage from a few shrapnel pellets Krupp, in contrast to Ehrhardt, who pin their faith on shrapnel for all types of balloon artillery, have invented special shells fitted with a slow match which ignites a gas with the object of causing an explosion in the hostile airship.

The shell on striking the airship's envelope immediately sets fire to the filling gas and the resultant explosion would totally annihilate the aerial vessel. These deadly shells are moreover designed to give off a very dense smoke so as to leave a wake which, with the aid of a glass, is distinctly visible and of immeasurable importance in sighting for a second shot, supposing the first to have missed. The distance is taken by a special apparatus set up by the side of the balloon gun, while the actual sighting is done by means of an apparatus something similar to the periscope of the submarine.

Krupps have constructed hitherto three makes of balloon guns—a 6.5 centimeter field gun, which fires a 4.3-gram projectile with an initial velocity of 620 meters, or about 2,000 feet a second, attaining at a maximum angle of discharge of 60 degrees and a height of 17,000 feet; a fortress 7.5 gun, firing a 6.4-kilogram shell and a heavy gun of 10.5 caliber, primarily intended for use on board warships.

"QUANTITY, QUALITY AND PRICE"

THE THREE ESSENTIALS THAT ARE GIVING WESTERN CANADA Greater Impulse Than Ever This Year.

The reports from the grain fields of central Canada, which comprises the Province of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, are not only good, but they are also very good. The year 1904 has not only been a year of bumper crops, but it has also been a year of bumper prices. The reports from the grain fields of central Canada, which comprises the Province of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, are not only good, but they are also very good. The year 1904 has not only been a year of bumper crops, but it has also been a year of bumper prices.

Various estimates of the total yield of wheat for the country have been made, but it is not the vast total that influences the general trader so much as what has been done individually. The grand total says 150 million bushels may have its effect on the grain price of the world. It may be interesting to know that in the world's market the wheat crop of Canada has suddenly become a power. The trading boards, and with the Argentine, and with Russia and India, is now a factor in the making of prices. At no time, what will be its effect five or ten years from now, when, instead of there being seven million acres under crop with a total yield of 125 or 130 million bushels, there will be from 17 to 20 million acres in wheat with a yield of from 325 to 600 million bushels. When it is considered that the highest yield in the United States of 1903 slightly exceeded 700 million bushels, the greatness of these figures may be understood. Well, such is a foretaste, for Canada has the land and it has the men. Even today the Province of Saskatchewan, one of the three great wheat-growing provinces of Canada, with 10,000 acres under wheat, produces nearly 80 million bushels, or upwards of one-tenth of the greatest yield of the United States. And this knowledge is not only in the hands of the farmers, but it is also in the hands of the government. As Lord Dufferin recently pointed out in speaking on this very subject, this year's crop does not represent one-tenth of the soil equally fertile that is yet to be brought under the plough.

Individually, reports are to hand of yields of twenty-five, thirty and thirty-five bushels to the acre. Scores of yields are reported of forty and some as high as fifty bushels. The farmer, who takes care of his soil, who sees his seed-bed ready early, is certain of a splendid crop.

The news of the magnificent crop yield throughout the Canadian West will be pleasing to the friends of the thousands of Americans who are residents in that country and who are vitally instrumental in the maintenance of their country. They are rendering to let the world know its capabilities.

Father's Method.
During a recent illness three five-year-old Toddy, usually as amiable, fully and obediently refused to take his medicine. After a somewhat prolonged and ineffectual argument with him, his mother at last, not the glass of medicine down, leaned her head on her hands and "played" that she was crying.

A moment passed, and the tender-hearted Toddy, unable longer to bear the sight of his mother's stricken attitude, inquired, "What's the matter mother, dear?"

"Without removing her hands from her eyes, she replied: 'I'm grieved that my son won't take his cotton oil for me.'"

Whereupon Toddy sat up in bed and offered consolingly: "Oh, I wouldn't feel badly if I were you, mother, dear. Father will be home soon and he'll make me take it."—The Delinquent.

"I'm very sorry," said the serious one, with never a smile. "They've locked it up. You see, there are so many Yale men in town."

A lady tells of a bad case of coffee poisoning and tells it in a way so simple and straightforward that literary skill could not improve it.

"I had neuritic headaches for 12 years," she says, "and suffered under agony. When I first began to have them I weighed 140 pounds, but they brought me down to 110. I went to many doctors and they gave me only temporary relief. So I suffered on, till one day a woman doctor told me to use Postum. She said I looked like I was coffee poisoned."

"So I began to drink Postum and I gained 15 pounds in a week and continued to gain, but not so fast as at first. My headaches began to leave me after I had used Postum about two weeks—long enough to get the coffee poison out of my system."

"Since I began to use Postum I can gladly say that I never know what a neuritic headache is like any more, and it was nothing but Postum that made me well. Before I used Postum I never went out alone. I would get bewildered and would not know which way to turn. Now I go alone and my head is as clear as a bell. My brain and nerves are stronger than they have been for years."

RECORDS BEATINGS OF HEART

Wonderful Mechanism by Which Organ is Made to Write Down Its Own Story.

A human heart, writing its own record with an actual finger of flame, is a startling spectacle that has recently been witnessed by German scientists. It sounds fanciful, doesn't it? But it is literally a fact that automatic recording of the heart's action by means of tracings from the point of a tiny blaze appears to have been made a newly practicable method of determining its condition, more reliable than any other test that can be applied.

The exact means employed is to apply to the subject's chest an instrument like a telephone transmitter, containing a thin rubber membrane which will reproduce the vibrations of the heart. This membrane forms

FACING DEATH in the FROZEN NORTH

Heroic Self-Sacrifice of Peary's Surgeon

by EDWARD B. CLARK

COPYRIGHT BY W. A. PATTERSON

ONE DAY it may be Commander Robert E. Peary will tell in his own words the story of the self-sacrifice of Dr. Edward E. Vincent, the youthful surgeon who accompanied the Peary Arctic expedition of 1893. All the heroic legends have not yet been told. The legends have not been told. The legends have not been told.

hopes and fear of the moment. They had reached the rock. Vincent looked to the right and beyond. "Doctor, is it death?" came a voice from behind. "No, life."

Occasionally at the United States military academy, in seeking to teach the lesson of the beauty of self-sacrifice, the chaplain will tell the cadets that all heroes who give up their lives for principle do not die by rifle shot or sword stroke. The martial spirit that is engendered by military instruction and by the glorious heritage of the memory of the sons of the academy who gave up their lives for the flag often leads the cadet into a train of thought which holds that the death which is more fitting to the soldier than any other is that which comes at the hands of the enemy of his country. While the occurrence was fresher in the memory of all than it is perhaps today, the West Point chaplains, in the pressing of their point, loved to speak of the death of Lieut. James E. Bell, who died because of his devotion to duty. "Jingle" Bell, lovingly called "Jingle"

by his fellow cadets, was a brother of Maj. W. W. Bell of Chicago and an uncle of Lillian Bell, the writer. When Lillian Bell wrote her story, "The Under Side of Things," with its pathetic ending, she wove the tale about the career of her uncle, Lieut. Bell, and gave to the story the depth of pathos that truth conveys. One of James E. Bell's classmates at West Point once said that when a man was fighting with another man he had something to grapple with, but that when a man was fighting disease the disease did all the grappling. You can't wound a disease adversary. Against him parry and thrust are nothing. Adjutant-Gen. E. D. Townsend once said that in all his army career he had never known such honor to be paid to a subaltern as were offered to the memory of First Lieut. James E. Bell. Two general orders were issued from headquarters of the army, each paying tribute to the devotion of the young officer of artillery who had died on the Dry Tortugas of yellow fever.

Port Jefferson on Tortugas in August of the year 1873 was garrisoned by Battery M, First United States Artillery. Outside of the surgeons there was only one officer, Lieut. Bell, at the post. Capt. L. L. Langdon had been granted a leave of absence to go north to the bedside of his dying father. On August 28 yellow fever appeared at the post. Within two days four of the garrison had died. Upon the first announcement of the appearance of the disease, Lieut. Bell sent all the children and some of the married men to an island three miles away. Within a day or two he sent to the same place nearly all the well men of the garrison, retaining only enough to nurse the sick. There could have been no criticism of Bell's course had he gone with the garrison, leaving the sick to the care of the surgeons and nurses. He stayed and devoted himself to the care of the sick in the hospital, assisted by the men who had volunteered.

The heat was fearful. There was not a pound of ice on the island and many of the deaths that followed one after another were due to the lack of this necessity. There were 20 cases of the fever and for whole days and nights continuously the devoted lieutenant, the surgeons and the nurses, no rest. With their own hands they dug the graves for the dead and with their own lips repeated over them the burial service. Capt. Langdon in the far north heard of the yellow fever at Port Jefferson. He instantly relinquished his leave of absence and hastened to return to his station. Some months before the outbreak of the fever Lieut. Bell had put in an application to be detailed as instructor of military drill at the University of Vermont. The application had been granted and Capt. Langdon, hurrying south to join his command, carried in his pocket the order relieving Lieut. Bell from duty at Port Jefferson and detailing him for work in Vermont. Langdon reached his post. He called in his first lieutenant and said: "I have here orders transferring you immediately to Vermont. You have done a noble work here. There is no reason why you should stay longer. You have been through enough of the awful thing. Go."

Bell said: "Captain, I don't want the order. If I read it I suppose I shall have to obey simply because it is an order. You keep it in your pocket until the fever is over and then I'll read it and go." Langdon shook his head. In a few days he felt the hot hand of the scourge on his brow. He went to his tent, pulled up his little camp table and wrote an official letter to the assistant adjutant-general at headquarters of the Department of the Gulf, Holly Springs, Miss. It was a long letter, covering many pages. There was in Bell's heart that day the fear that he might die and leave undone an act of duty. He cherished the thought of the loyalty of the surgeons and the enlisted men who had so nobly performed their duties to the sick and dying, facing the fever and death itself without flinching. He mentioned in the official communication for each doctor and man by name, recommending them for recognition at the hands of the department. Of himself he said nothing. His whole thought was that recognition should be given others.

Lieut. James E. Bell put down his pen, went to the hospital and in three days was dead. The closing paragraphs of one of the general orders touching this man and his love of duty are these: "The only officer in an isolated post when it was visited by a dangerous epidemic, he seemed to multiply himself in his ever-present care and watchfulness for the men of his command, and it is doubtless due to the exhaustion and fatigue resulting from his anxious discharge of duty that he finally fell a victim to the disease."

"He died in the faithful discharge of a soldier's duty." "Way up north were wife and child. The little one crept up to the blackboard mother and said: 'Is my darling faddy tummin' home to-day?' " "Not to-day, dear. Perhaps to-morrow."

BALLOON ARTILLERY PROBLEM

While One Inventor Constructs Air Craft, Another Builds Guns to Destroy Them.

A writer in the Star has the following to say on the subject of aerial war craft: Germany's government has been induced by the wonderful flights accomplished by the Zeppelin, Parseval and Gross airships to form an air fleet which already numbers six cruisers, but this very success has also awakened the German military authorities to the necessity of improving German's artillery with a view to combating hostile airships. This year both the Krupp and Ehrhardt works have planned balloon guns on the market. The inventors of balloon artillery had several things to bear in mind. The objective is very mobile, can develop great speed and change its direction, up or down and to all points of the compass very rapidly and with accuracy. Therefore the guns had to be capable of the most rapid aiming, while the projectiles had to be made to travel at a very high velocity. Again, since a moving airship, when nearing the hostile zone, will ascend to the greatest height attainable, the guns had to be made so as to fire practically perpendicularly to an immense height. It is obvious that the field artillery method of training the heartbeats can be exactly ascertained.—Technical World Magazine.

ABRUZZI IS COMING BACK

Duke Will Visit United States Next Spring and Get Miss Elkins' Final Answer.

Washington.—The duke of the Abruzzi, in answer to a friend, declares his recent promotion to the vice-ambassador of the Italian navy will not interfere with his plans to visit this country early in the spring. According to present arrangements he will reach here in March. Under the auspices of the National Geographic Society he will give four lectures on the ascension of the Asiatic mountain range. These lectures will be given in New York, Boston, Philadelphia and Washington. It is reported here that this visit will take place with the understanding that he will not be treated as a visiting member of a royal house. This information is said by his friends to indicate a desire to receive a reply from Miss Katharine Elkins. One of her closest friends is authority for the statement that she will have made up her mind by that time as to whether she will yield her hand or not. The report that no less a personage than King Edward was responsible for the additional difficulties in the troubled career of the duke's love making has gained credence from the announcement of the duke's expected visit to America.

KERENS HONORED BY TAFT

St. Louis, Mo., Who Has Long Been Republican "Wheel Horse," Appointed Minister to Austria.

St. Louis.—Richard C. Kerens, whom President Taft has appointed minister to Austria-Hungary, is one of the old "wheel horses" of the Republican party in Missouri. He has been a leader in the movement for the election of a Republican to the office of governor of this state. Kerens has an attempt been made to elect him United States senator.

When the Republican party gained control of the state legislature in the election at which Joseph W. Folk, a Democrat, was elected governor, Kerens was one of the men who were elected to the legislature. Kerens was one of the men who were elected to the legislature.

Thomas L. Niedringhaus, who was national committeeman that year, however, wanted the place for himself. He entered the lists against Kerens and there was a deadlock which lasted some time. Finally there was a compromise which resulted in the election of William H. Warner of Kansas City. Warner's term will be up next year and should the Republicans regain control of the legislature it was believed Kerens would have a good chance. This may be one of the reasons for his selection as an envoy.

Mr. Kerens is a multi-millionaire, aged 69 years, and his home is in Vandewater place, a thoroughfare three blocks long in which none but millionaires live. He was a member of the Republican national executive committee from 1894 to 1900 and a committee of the Republican national committee from 1892 to 1904. He made his fortune in railroad building and the only public office of importance he ever held was as one of the three United States commissioners on the Inter-Continental railway commission.

Mr. Kerens is a Catholic and in high favor at the Vatican. He was the recipient of the Laetare medal from the University of Notre Dame in 1904. Mr. Kerens has one daughter whose friends predict for her a brilliant career in Austrian society.

"QUANTITY, QUALITY AND PRICE"

THE THREE ESSENTIALS THAT ARE GIVING WESTERN CANADA Greater Impulse Than Ever This Year.

The reports from the grain fields of Central Canada, which comprise the Provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta are to hand. The year 1904 has not only kept pace with previous years in providing the portion of the Canadian crop capable of producing a surplus yield of all the staple grains, but it has thoroughly outstripped previous seasons. There is quantity, quality and price and from all parts of an area of about 200,000 square miles there comes the strong retrain of contentment and satisfaction. In the distribution of the conditions, no district has been overlooked.

Various estimates of the total yield of wheat for the country have been made, but it is not the vast total that influences the general reader much as what has been done individually. The grand total, say 150 million bushels, may have its effect on the grain price of the world; it may be interesting to know that in the world's markets the wheat crop of Canada has suddenly broken upon the trading boards, and with the Argentine, and with Russia and India, is now a factor in the making of prices. It is so today, what will be the effect five or ten years from now, when, instead of there being seven million acres under crop with a total yield of 125 or 130 million bushels, there will be from 17 to 20 million acres in wheat with a yield of from 325 to 600 million bushels. When it is considered that the largest yield in the United States has slightly exceeded 700 million bushels, the greatness of these figures may be understood. Well, such is a foreboding forecast for Canada has the land and it has the soil. Even today the Province of Saskatchewan, one of the three great wheat growing provinces of Canada, with 40,000 acres under wheat, produces nearly 20 million bushels, or upwards of one-tenth of the greatest yield of the United States. And Saskatchewan is yet only in the beginning of its development. As Lord Grey recently pointed out in speaking on this very subject, the wheat crop does not represent one-tenth of the soil's equally fertile field is yet to be brought under the plough.

Individually, reports are to hand of yields of twenty-five, thirty and thirty-five bushels to the acre. Scores of yields are reported of forty and some as high as fifty bushels. The farmer, who takes care of his soil, who sows his seed early, who plants his seed early, is certain of a splendid crop.

The news of the magnificent crop yield throughout the Canadian West will be pleasing to the friends of the thousands of Americans who are residents in that country and who are vastly interested in the abundance they are endeavoring to let the world know its capabilities.

COULDN'T WAIT.

Father's friend.

Tell me, I cannot make you a new suit until you have paid for your last one, Mr. Nobby.—But I can't wait on your winter is here and I need something warm.

Father's friend.

During the recent illness the five-year-old Teddy, usually so amiable, flatly and obstinately refused to take his medicine. After a somewhat prolonged and ineffectual argument with him, his mother at last, in the place of medicine down, learned how to get her hands and "played" that she was crying.

A moment passed, and the tender-hearted Teddy, unable longer to bear the sight of his mother's stricken attitude, inquired, "What's the matter, mother, dear?"

Without moving her hands from her eyes, she replied: "I'm grieved that my son won't take his castor oil for me."

Whereupon Teddy sat up in bed and offered consolingly: "Oh, I wouldn't feel badly if I were you, mother, for Father will be home soon and he'll make me take it." The Indicator.

Harvard Scored.

It was the morning of the Yale-Harvard game at Cambridge, and two of the New Haven collegians were wandering through the Harvard yard, looking at the university buildings.

Down a walk toward them came a youth of serious aspect, but palpably an undergraduate.

"I beg your pardon," said the Yale man, "but I am out of a wag, to the stranger, 'can you tell me where I can find Harvard university?'"

"I'm very sorry," said the serious one, with never a smile. "They've locked it up. You see, there are no many Yale men in town."

A WOMAN DOCTOR

Was Quick to See that Coffee was Doing the Mischief.

A lady tells of a bad case of coffee poisoning and tells it in a way so simple and straightforward that literary skill could not improve it.

"I had neuralgic headaches for 12 years," she says, "and suffered untold agony. When I first began to have them I weighed 140 pounds, but I went brought me down to 110. I went to many doctors and they gave me only temporary relief. So I suffered till one day a woman doctor told me to use Postum. She said I looked like I was coffee poisoned."

"So I began to drink Postum and I gained 15 pounds in the first few weeks and continued to gain, but not so fast as at first. My headaches began to lessen. After I had used Postum about two weeks—long enough to get the coffee poison out of my system."

"Since I began to use Postum I can gladly say that I never know what a neuralgic headache is like any more, and it was nothing but Postum that made me well. Before I used Postum I never went out alone; I would get bewildered and would not know which way to turn. Now I go alone and my head is as clear as a bell. My brain and nerves are stronger than they have been for years."

"I read the above letter. 'The Road to Wellville,' in pgs. 'There's a Reason.' Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are real, true, and full of honest interest."

RECORDS BEATINGS OF HEART

Wonderful Mechanism by Which Organ is Made to Write Down Its Own Story.

A human heart, writing its own record of its own action, is a startling spectacle that has recently been witnessed by German scientists. It sounds fanciful, doesn't it? But it is literally a fact that automatic recording of the heart's action by means of one wall of a chamber to which are attached two tubes, one of which brings in acetylene gas, while the other leads to a vertical burner, where the gas is ignited. The vibrations of which the heart sounds are composed are transmitted to the membrane and so to the flame. On a paper tape run through the flame, therefore, will appear the record. The fluctuating flame produces a succession of rings, due to a series of vibrations. Producing their records side by side, on the same tape, they provide a picture from which the duration of and the intervals between the heartbeats can be exactly ascertained.—Technical World Magazine.

London "Bobbys" Taught Politeness. Instructions to policemen, in the employ of cabmen and others in the city of London, are the latest fad of the London society women. They seem to have banded together to instill the rudiments of courtesy into the manners of those they consider their inferiors. Few of them, however, are so particular in bringing up "the lower classes" in the way they should go.

Flowers of the States

There is a lively discussion in Virginia over the adoption of a state flower. The daisy has been suggested, and it is both affirmed and denied that this flower was first brought south by the northern soldiers during the civil war.

The goldenrod is already the chosen flower of Alabama, Kentucky, Maryland and Nebraska. Arkansas and Michigan have adopted the apple blossom. Louisiana and Mississippi the magnolia. Washington and West Virginia rhododendron. Iowa and North Dakota the wild rose. California has the poppy. Colorado the columbine. Connecticut the mountain laurel. Delaware the peach blossom. Idaho the spring daisy. Indiana the corn cobs. Kansas the sunflower. Maine the pine cone. Minnesota the meadow lark. Montana the rose. New York the rose. Ohio the red carnation. Oklahoma the mistletoe. Oregon the grape. Rhode Island the violet. South Dakota "pasque." Texas the blue bonnet. Utah the sage lily. Vermont red clover. Tennessee the daisy.

Chinese Coins.

If we must eat cold storage eggs from China we ought to know how we pay for them. Chinese business is done in taels. But the tael is not a coin; it is a Chinese ounce of silver, with, of course, constantly fluctuating value. China's only coin in use until recently was the copper cash—1,200 to a Mexican silver dollar, 2,850 to the American dollar. Now a new coin—the ten-cash piece—made at the provincial mints, is replacing the old one. In all the coast and river ports the old Mexican dollar was long current, but the Chinese dollars are now coined in all the provinces. The mintage of one province, however, is always subject to a discount in every other.

Who Gave Him Away? A grouchy stockholder of the Bank of England wants all women clerks discharged from the institution on the ground that they cannot keep a secret. Of course, it was wrong to tell him. He should have been more cautious.

Wisconsin Orchards.

Speaking of the high prices secured by Wisconsin apple growers this year Secretary Cranfield of the State Horticultural society said:

"The ignorance of Wisconsin people concerning Wisconsin is surprising, often amusing and not seldom annoying to those who are working for the development of the state.

"For instance, one of the promoters of a western irrigation scheme is reported to have told a Madison man recently that there was not an apple orchard within fifty miles of Madison and that apples could hardly be grown within that radius of Madison, that Wisconsin was not a fruit state, never would be a fruit state, and impossible to raise fruit here and so on and so forth.

"Reports from Richland county show yields up to $985 for single acres. One and one-fourth acres yielded 120 barrels sold at $1.50 a barrel. Seven acres orchard owned by Rosen Davis, aged 12 years, five varieties, 450 barrels at $1.50. The prices are gross, but when cost of barrels, freight to Chicago, and commission is deducted we find that these growers received more than $1 a bushel.

"I could give pages of such figures concerning the production of apples. The Sturgeon Bay cherry region is now famous throughout the state both for quality and quantity of fruit. A. L. Hatch of Sturgeon Bay sold 2,500 cases of cherries from eight acres, 700 trees, for which he received $1,200.25. Arthur Sieglaff, whose wife charged him with a bigamous marriage, alleging that he married a girl at Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, had his preliminary hearing in Justice Holke's court last Thursday. The prisoner was discharged by direction of the district attorney for the reason that the crime, if any, was alleged to have been committed in the state of Idaho and will have to be prosecuted there. Mrs. Sieglaff went to Milwaukee where she made complaint against her husband for assault and battery and abandonment. The Milwaukee Daily News of January 9 states that the cases were heard before Justice Neelon Saturday morning and both dismissed. (Two Late for Last Week.)

On Sunday afternoon a large part of the congregation gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gust Anderson to surprise C. Thunberg, who has his home at Anderson's during the winter. The people appeared rather suddenly outside of the Anderson home. It seemed as though they had "dropped from the sky." In a few minutes they had taken possession of the interior of the home. Here the smiling faces of all and the word "surprise" to the one who did not previously know about it. For a while, however, the situation was rather mysterious, for it seemed as though all had come only to "feel at home" and to warm themselves round the heating stove in the parlor, which apparently became the chief center of attraction to as many as could be seated and gathered around it, and the stove seemed to try its best to make everybody feel warm and comfortable. But that the crowd had not only come to be warmed but also to warm, was made clear as soon as the kitchen stove had the coffee cooked and ready to be served. Then as the refreshments were served the real surprise came. Under the napkin on the place served to Mr. Thunberg lay an envelope which contained a sum of money from the congregation. After all were through with the refreshments the quartette sang a few songs. Then Mr. Thunberg expressed his hearty thanks and appreciation to all present and to all who had participated in the contribution. After another song by the quartette, John Worland, Sr., spoke in a few but warm and hearty words on behalf of the congregation. The crowd then dispersed, some going to their homes, while others remained till church time.

Mustn't Believe All You Read.

One of our exchanges says "there is no profession in the universe which is so trying upon the nerves as journalism," and continues with some more things along this line, in which it tries to make out that a man who is engaged in publishing a newspaper has his share of the troubles of this world. This is all both and editors of newspapers should be careful how they publish such rot. Why, just the other day a man told us that after he got so old and useless that he was not able to teach school any more he was going to start into the newspaper business and make his living that way.

Why, anybody can run a newspaper more successfully than the man who is doing it. It is so simple and there is so little real work about making a success out of a newspaper that the real wonder is that there are not more successful ones. And this talk about nerves. Any man who expects to make a success of the business should not have any nerves. In fact, very few do. Nerve is alright, but nerves, never.

We are going to tell a few of the qualifications necessary for a successful newspaper career, but there are so few of them that we cannot recall any of them at the present time. Why, we used to know a fellow, he was a sort of a relative of ours, who always claimed that he could do all the work there was to be done on a newspaper in a week in one day. We never heard of his holding down a job of the kind, nor never knew that he tried to get such a job, but have no doubt he was telling the truth. A man ought to be able to judge what he can do himself better than anybody else can tell him.

Why, there was a young fellow running a paper somewhere that we read about, that was only 11 years old. That is another thing that goes to prove that it takes neither brain nor brawn to edit a newspaper. There is no other business that a young fellow eleven years old could run successfully. Who ever heard of an eleven year old blacksmith, or an eleven year old barber, or an eleven year old lawyer, or an eleven year old saloon keeper, all of which goes to prove the claims that we have already made in the matter. Why, we know of editors who have not as much sense as the average eleven year old boy. Doesn't that prove it.

Why, a fellow told us just the other day that we had no troubles. He knew we didn't because we never said anything about them in the paper. He was right, we don't have any, and we don't care who knows it. But why multiply evidence in this manner. We feel that we have proven our case in such a thorough manner that there is no need to say more about it. Any man with as much brains as an ordinary setter pup is well qualified for the business and should not hesitate, if the opportunity presents itself, to engage in it.

Help! Help!
Help to make the city better,
Help to make the city clean;
Don't be just a constant fretter,
Add some beauty to the scene;
You may not, indeed, be able
To erect a gleaming dome,
But clean up around your stable,
Beautify your little home.
Help to make the town attractive,
Help to stop the ones who sneer;
It will pay you to be active,
Since your interests are here.
Would your back yard stand inspection?
What about that vacant lot?
Rubbish helps to spread dejection,
Neatness brings the cheerful thought.
Help to make the city fairer,
You can do it if you try,
And you'll be a profit sharer
In the splendid by and by.
Don't forget while you are grumbling
That you might do something more;
Let there be no future stumbling
O'er obstructions at your door.
Help to make the town more splendid,
Do the part you have to do;
There is much that may be mended
Through a little aid from you;
Help decrease the dirt that's blowing,
Help to purify the breeze;
When it happens to be snowing
Clean your sidewalk, if you please.

Mustn't Believe All You Read.

One of our exchanges says "there is no profession in the universe which is so trying upon the nerves as journalism." and continues with some more things along this line, in which it tries to make out that a man who is engaged in publishing a newspaper has his share of the troubles of this world. This is all trash and editors of newspapers should be careful how they publish such a man. Why, just the other day a man told us that after he got so old and useless that he was not able to teach school any more he was going to start into the newspaper business and make his living that way.

Why, anybody can run a newspaper more successfully than the man who is doing it. It is so simple and there is so little real work about making a success out of a newspaper that the real wonder is that there are not more successful ones. And this talk about nerves. Any man who expects to make a success of the business should not have any nerves. In fact, very few do. Nerve is alright, but nerves, never.

We are going to tell a few of the qualifications necessary for a successful newspaper career, but there are so few of them that we cannot recall any of them at the present time. Why, we used to know a fellow, he was a sort of a relative of ours, who always claimed that he could do all the work there was in being done on a newspaper in a week in one day. We never heard of his holding down a job of the kind, nor never knew that he tried to get such a job, but have no doubt he was telling the truth. A man ought to be able to judge what he can do himself better than anybody else can tell him.

Why, there was a young fellow running a paper somewhere that we read about, that was only 11 years old. That is another thing that goes to prove that it takes neither brain nor brawn to edit a newspaper. There is no other business that a young fellow eleven years old could run successfully. Who ever heard of an eleven year old blacksmith, or an eleven year old barber, or an eleven year old lawyer, or an eleven year old saloon keeper, all of which goes to prove the claims that we have already made in the matter. Why, we know of editors who have not as much sense as the average eleven year old boy. Doesn't that prove it.

Why, a fellow told us just the other day that he had no troubles. He knew we didn't because we never said anything about them in the paper. He was right, we don't have any, and we don't care who knows it. But why multiply evidence in this manner. We feel that we have proven our case in such a thorough manner that there is no need to say more about it. Any man with as much brains as an ordinary setter pup is well qualified for the business and should not hesitate, if the opportunity presents itself, to engage in it.

Help! Help!
Help to make the city better;
Help to make the city clean;
Don't be just a constant fretter;
Add some beauty to the scene;
You may not, indeed, be able
To erect a gleaming dome,
But clean up around your stable,
Beautify your little home.

Help to make the town attractive;
Help to stop the ones who sneer;
It will pay you to be active.
Since your interests are here,
Would your back yard stand inspection?

What about that vacant lot?
Rubbish helps to spread dejection.
Neatness brings the cheerful thought.
Help to make the city fairer,
You can do it if you try.
And you'll be a profit sharer
In the splendid by and by:
Don't forget while you are grumbling
That you might do something more;
Let there be no future stumbling
Over obstructions at your door.

Help to make the town more splendid,
Do the part you have to do;
There is much that can be mended
Through a little aid from you;
Help to decrease the dirt that's blowing,
Help to purify the breeze;
When it happens to be snowing
Clean your sidewalk, if you please.

Kansas has some reason to be proud of its record this year in the production of corn, wheat and oats, and especially of corn. The total of the three crops is placed at more than $10,000,000. In any previous year in its history, and obviously that is a showing to be proud of. But singularly enough, along with this proud showing the corn has been coming forward with the depressing information that the baby crop in Kansas has fallen off in the same year, says Manchester Union. There were 25,000 babies born in Kansas in the fiscal year 1907, and only 23,500 in the fiscal year 1908. Of course the first question that presents itself is what the fiscal future of a year has to do with such a matter as this. Yet it is obvious that one must start from somewhere in such comparisons, and perhaps the beginning and end of the fiscal year are as good points as any. The thought that is sure to suggest itself is, were the Kansas farmers so busy planting their big crops of wheat, corn and oats that they overlooked the greater problem of population?

The census "sky-phre" has made its laudatory appearance in our midst. Time was when a man attired himself only in sober hues, as befitted his dignity and importance, says Washington Herald. No frivolous frolicking in fanciful garb appealed to the masculine taste. A strong reaction from the days of silken hose and breeches, gold-laced coats and small clothes swayed the balance in favor of Puritanical and Quakerish garb of the past two generations. But man is becoming emancipated from his somber thrall-dom; not all at once, but gradually, and is usually the case with great and important reforms. The necktie has long since succeeded to the inevitable, and its flamboyant brilliancy now shames the rainbow and the peacock. Masculine modesty, too, has assumed the colors of the spectrum in weird and wonderful design. In hats we have passed the quiet black, brown and gray stage, apparently. The hard college hatband was only the forerunner of the solid green hat which burst upon a startled public a year or so ago. It was a modest shade of green, to be sure, but green for all that.

If a man doesn't love his work, he would better get something else to do. But the trouble is that such people will hardly have any kind of work. The trouble is in them. They lack intelligence. If they knew enough to know good work they would soon learn to love it. The manual training scheme has this in view—to surround the job a man is doing with such intelligence and taste as will make it attractive to him. "The man who is in love with his job gets more contentment out of life than any other," says Brander Matthews; and he gets a great part of his contentment in doing his work right. No man can love his work who is dishonest about his work. This is shirking or doing it negligently. These things always go together—honest work, contentment and love of the job.

The Farmers' National congress, in session at Raleigh, N. C., passed resolutions asking for an amendment of the general parcels post regulations admitting to the mails parcels up to the weight of eleven pounds and reducing the rate to 12 cents a pound, and also for the adoption of the rural delivery parcels post for a local service at a lower rate, says Boston Herald. Professions of interest in the farmer, inspiring desire for rural uplift, and the effort to conserve the country life of the nation might find practical expression in this postal legislation which every organization of farmers throughout the country has endorsed, and which successive postmasters general have approved, and which the express monopolists have been most interested in opposing.

ONLY EMPLOYEES ARE GUILTY
Declare Absolutely None of the Officers of the Trust Had Any Knowledge of the Existence of Notorious Transactions

New York. At the annual meeting of the stockholders of the American Sugar Company, generally known as the "sugar trust," at Jersey City, Wednesday, an elaborate and lengthy statement was read in which the directors absolve themselves from all blame for the existence of the trusts which caused the company to return to the United States government $2,000,000. It is further declared that not a single officer of the company had the least knowledge of the existence of the fraudulent proceedings. The report denies that the company is either a trust or monopoly.

"No attempt has been made to shield anyone and your board has no reason to believe, and does not believe, that any executive officer or director of this company had any knowledge of, or participation in this fraudulent weighing," is one of the statements contained in this remarkable report.

"While the assets and liabilities of this company are the property of the stockholders," continues the report, "yet your directors recognize the legitimate interest which the public has in a business organization which deals to a large extent in a necessity of life. A further motive for this report is found in the fact that it seems to be the only method by which this company can correct the widespread misrepresentation and unjust criticism to which it has been subjected."

A business corporation can have no asset more valuable than the good will of the public, and that good will can best be gained by explaining to the public the nature of any existing misrepresentation as to its character and operation.

The report further says that, contrary to general belief, the stock of the company is held, not by a few wealthy individuals, the fact being that the average holding stock by any individual being less than 50 shares.

PASS WHITE SLAVE BILL
House Adopts Drastic Measure Which Will Go Far Toward Breaking Up Infamous Traffic

Washington. Representative Sabath of Chicago secured against Representative Mann when the Bennett Sabath white slave bill was passed by the House Wednesday. This action, in effect, sends the Mann bill on the same subject to the house waste basket.

The Bennett-Sabath bill is perhaps the most drastic measure of the kind ever adopted by any state or nation, and if it is passed by the senate will go far toward breaking up the white slave traffic. It makes it a felony to import any person for immoral purposes, and then provides that any alien found in any disorderly house, or brothel in any way therefrom, may be deported.

Brokerage Firm Is Suspended Because of Its Action in Rock Island Flurry

New York. Shuman H. Chapin, head of the stock brokerage firm of S. B. Coincident with this action Theodore A. Jackson of Chicago, president of the Rock Island Company, the holding corporation of the Rock Island railroad, resigned his office as well as the chairmanship of the executive committee.

Washington. A fine memorial statue of Gen. Lew Wallace of that name, was unveiled at ten o'clock Tuesday evening in Statuary hall of the capitol. It stands beside the statue of Oliver Morton, the war governor of the Indiana state, and admittedly is one of the best works of art among all the sculptures the national capitol contains.

The ceremony was witnessed by a great gathering of notable men from all over the country. Gov. George Duane of Washington, a veteran of the Spanish-American war, delivered the invocation, and the statue was unveiled by Gen. Wallace's grandson, Lew Wallace, Jr. The two United States senators from Indiana, Albert J. Hoy and George B. Venable, delivered addresses, and James Whitcomb Riley read an original poem. William Allen Wood of Indianapolis presented the statue on behalf of the memorial commission and Gov. Marshall accepted it on behalf of the state of Indiana.

The statue of Gen. Wallace, an American sculptor now residing in Paris. The figure is slightly over life size, and with the pedestal, stands over ten feet high. It is of white marble and represents the author bareheaded and with his military uniform carefully fastened, as if he had just emerged from his tent. He is erect in posture and on the alert, his eye looking into the distance. The pedestal is a square block of Indiana limestone.

ELOPING HEIRESS ARRESTED
Roberta De Janon and Frederic Cohen Are Found in Rooming House at Chicago

Chicago.—Roberta De Janon, the 17-year-old heiress of Philadelphia, and Frederic Cohen, a writer, who disappeared from Philadelphia 12 days ago, were arrested Monday in a rooming house on the North side in this city.

After leaving Philadelphia the couple went to Montreal, thence to St. Louis, N. H., where they purchased tickets for England, but just before the steamer was about to sail they changed their minds and took a boat to Boston. At the latter city they boarded a train and came direct to Chicago.

Miss De Janon and Cohen reached here last Thursday night and have since been living in a third-story, back room, equipped for light housekeeping.

At the police station Miss De Janon said that she and Cohen went away, and had not permitted him to either send her back home or to notify her relatives of their whereabouts.

To all of this Cohen cheerfully assented and further declared that he had tried to dissuade her from the idea of running away together.

The girl gave as a reason for leaving her parental home in Philadelphia that her grandfather was about to send her away to school at Bryn Mawr and she did not wish to go. She said she liked Cohen and that he had treated her like a daughter and that he had not maltreated her in any way since they left the Quaker city.

KILLS FAMILY OF THREE
Texas Farmer Slays His Wife and Two Children, Seriously Wounds Niece, Then Suicide

Ballinger, Tex.—F. B. Kimbler, living in the northern part of this county, killed his wife, his six-year-old son and three-year-old daughter, seriously wounded his niece, aged 20, and ended his own life by cutting his throat from ear to ear with a pocket knife.

Kimbler had been in ill health for two months, but arose at the usual time and was assisting his wife in making the fires. He stopped out and got a hatchet and, returning to the room where his wife was, with the hatchet in his hand, said:

"Wife, we have all got to go!" He then split her head open with one blow of the hatchet. Going over to the bed where the children were still asleep he also attacked them with the hatchet.

Then he entered his niece's room and struck her several blows on the head and arms. By this time a nephew of Kimbler was aroused and he and the wounded young woman made their escape.

Returning to the room where his wife lay unconscious on the floor, Kimbler used a pocket knife to end his own life.

REVIEW DANES' COOK REPORT
Geographic Society at Washington Receive Finding of University of Copenhagen Commission.

Washington.—The long-delayed report of the University of Copenhagen to the National Geographic society, has arrived in Washington. It was written in Danish, and though brief, was to the point.

After being translated the report was reviewed Sunday by Dr. J. Howard Gore, Rear Admiral H. N. Pillsbury and Prof. C. Willard Hayes, chief geologist of the United States Geological society, constituting the special committee of the Geographic society appointed to review the Cook data.

None of the Cook data accompanied the report. The documents which were handed to the commission for examination were:

1. A typewritten report of Dr. Cook's north pole journey, made by Mr. Lonsdale.
2. A typewritten copy made from Dr. Cook's notebooks, covering the period from March 18, 1908, until June 13, 1908, the time in which, according to Dr. Cook's statement, he journeyed to the pole and back to an undefined point on the polar ice west of Axel Heiberg's land.

The papers named were not accompanied by any letter from Dr. Cook, but Mr. Lonsdale stated orally that the original notebooks, which for safety's sake had been sent to Europe by another route, would be turned over to the university in the course of a few days.

TOLD STORY TO DR. SCHELL
Says He Helped Murder Thorne and Was Underpaid, Chagrined, Victim 'Spark Started' Fire

St. Louis. Ray Lamphere, charged recently in the Indiana penitentiary at Michigan City, while serving a term for setting fire to the home of Mrs. Della Thorne, near Laporte, Ind. did not carry the secrets of the Gunness murder from the tomb with him, according to a copyrighted story in the Post Dispatch Thursday.

The confession was made to Rev. E. A. Schell, formerly pastor of the Lutheran Methodist church, now president of the Iowa Wesleyan and recently at Mount Pleasant, Ia., and held by him in a private conversation with the confidential.

The Post Dispatch says Rev. Mr. Schell would verify, if he would consent to break the silence, the confession it publishes. The Post Dispatch, however, says the confession it publishes was made to a man of unusual ability.

Lamphere, according to the confession, had a guilty knowledge of the murder of three men in the Gunness home during the time he lived there, about eight months in 1907, and he admitted Mrs. Gunness in disposing of the bodies of the three men.

He said he thought he had not received as much of the profits of the transaction as he considered himself entitled to, and he went to the telephone at night with a woman, either named Mrs. Gunness, her three children and Jennie Olson. He and the woman then searched the house, find between $50 and $70. The light they used was a candle, and they left the house without knowing they had left behind a spark that soon burst into flames.

Mrs. Gunness' method of killing her victims, Lamphere said, was first to chloroform them as they slept and then if the drugs did not itself kill, to sever the heads with an ax. Each time a man was to be murdered, according to Lamphere, she sent him to purchase chloroform. Lamphere said he saw one of them killed and aided in burying all three. These men were Andrew Helgeborn and probably the husband of Mrs. Gunness. At the time of the Lamphere trial it was thought Jennie Olson had been killed by Mrs. Gunness. Lamphere, however, details how Mrs. Gunness had secured her in the home after she returned from a visit and she was chloroformed by Lamphere and his accomplice.

A few nights after they came back there was another burying. Lamphere received money once more from Mrs. Gunness, and he said he became the trusted ally of Mrs. Gunness.

NEWS BREVITIES

Madison, Wis. President and Attorney General Gillett have been advised of the local situation and have been appealed to for a ruling in the fight to compel the revision of the nation license in the place for north men by Canon Garfield in South Eleventh street, who was convicted of selling by lot to Indians and who also placed his place in 1st district who is now in charge and who has an application in to the city council for a new school house.

Waukegan. In the case of the Antigo Water Company against the city of Antigo for water rentals the jury returned a special verdict, assessing all five years, in favor of the city. The amount involved is $4,492.50. There are three other Indian cases pending the total amount involved being $11,545.55. The city council decided that the service was not up to the requirement. It is understood the case will be appealed to the supreme court.

Superior. A decision as to the additional of a division of the Milwaukee diocese of the Episcopal church of Wisconsin, which, if thought wise, would mean the forming of the Superior diocese, will be reached at the meeting of the convention to be held next week in this city. The diocese, if made, would give 20 counties to the Superior diocese. Bishop W. W. Webb of Milwaukee will be here and will speak on the matter.

Eau Claire. The Wisconsin Telephone Company has refused to comply with the order of the council to re-establish free telephone service in the city offices. The service was discontinued last July, the company claiming that under the ruling of the state rate commission it could no longer give free use of phones to the city. The matter will likely be taken before the state commission.

Waukegan. -- Professor Carpenter stated that the plan by which Andy Ward, an Indianapolis school man, is to sell beer in this county is, in his opinion, illegal, and prosecution will commence here as soon as the details are known. An order on the city of Milwaukee, and other state selling through Waukegan, and other cities, in "dry" territory are interested, the result in Waukegan county will be watched over Indiana.

Manitowish. If the First Presbyterian church is willing to wait 30 days for him, Rev. George Tontel of Ironwood, who was tendered a call and, after accepting, declined because of the protest of his parishioners, is willing to come to the city. Mr. Tontel encountered strong protest at Ironwood when he talked of leaving and his salary was increased to $1,700.

Superior. Representatives of the various railroads agreed to the demands of the Commercial club's rate committee for lower switching rates. The charges to points within the city limits will be reduced from 10 cents to 5 cents; to Albion, 25 cents; to Potosi and Potosi Junction, 25 cents; instead of 30 cents. The minimum carload will be 10,000 pounds.

Eau Claire. -- George J. Ketchum, an Omaha brakeman who fell under a freight train at Onk and lost both legs, has just instituted a suit against the company for $50,000 damages. Ketchum declares a protruding bar door on the freight train struck him and knocked him under the car wheels.

Janesville. With the thermometer thirty-one degrees below zero, and nearly three feet of snow on the roofs, the big tobacco warehouse of Green & Sons collapsed, doing considerable damage. At Milton, 12 miles east of here, 35 degrees below zero is reported.

Janesville. -- A. C. Thum, assistant attorney general, is presenting the arguments for the state in the Indian Ford dam matter, which has been on hearing here for several weeks.

Racine. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Williamson of this city celebrated their golden wedding. They were married in Denmark in 1859, and came to Racine 12 years later.

Seymour. -- Charles Bauman, 18 years old, was bound over, charged with being one of the two boys who broke into Falek & Walk's store.

Winter. -- The large two-story building of the Winter emporium was burned to the ground. The fire originated in a defective chimney.

Eau Claire. The Bonell Carriage works caught fire, the buildings being partially destroyed and causing a damage of $5,000.

Marquette. -- As a result of being bitten by a three-month-old spitz puppy, Mrs. Fritz Schimpfeler, her three children, Mary, Philomena and Ottilie, and Kowle Hofschiager, were sent to Chicago for treatment at the Pasteur institute. The animal was pronounced mad by experts.

Portage. -- The council adopted a resolution prohibiting the Standard Oil Company and the Valley Oil Company from unloading oil cars and storing oil on their premises in the First ward. This will necessitate the removal of these companies' warehouses.

Sheboygan. -- Chinamen of Chicago and Detroit have united in an effort to secure a pardon for Sam Lee, convicted of a grave offense. In this city, Mrs. Mary, Philomena and Ottilie, and Kowle Hofschiager, were sent to Chicago for treatment at the Pasteur institute. The animal was pronounced mad by experts.

Beloit. -- Prof. C. A. Culver of Beloit college picked up the call of the railroad station at New Orleans with his wireless apparatus. He hopes soon to be able to get complete messages from the Gulf coast city.

Superior. -- There will be no decision on the high license question at the polls next spring unless the matter is brought before the people by some other agency than the common council. The city fathers adopted a majority report of the license committee, which recommended that the question be withheld until 1911.

A BURNING ERUPTION FROM HEAD TO FEET

"Four years ago I suffered severely with a terrible eruption, being a mass of sores from head to foot and for six weeks confined to my bed. During that time I suffered continual pain from itching and burning. After being given up by my doctor, I was advised to try Cuticura Remedial. After the first bath with Cuticura Soap and application of Cuticura Ointment I enjoyed the first good sleep during my entire illness. I also used Cuticura Resolvent and the treatment was continued for about three weeks. At the end of that time I was able to be about the house, entirely cured, and have felt no ill effects since. I would advise any person suffering from any form of skin trouble to try the Cuticura Remedial as I know what they did for me. Mrs. Edward Manning, 1112 Sullia St., Watertown, N. Y., April 11, 1909."
